Charleston Profile

Senior Airman Chad Helmer 437th Operations Support Squadron

Senior Airman Chad Helmer is a weather forecaster with the 437th Operations Support Squadron Weather Flight. His duties include issuing weather reports, high wind advisories and watches and warnings for severe weather. The weather flight's customers include aircrews and various agencies on base. Helmer and other flight members provide more than a dozen weather briefings on a daily basis.

Helmer is originally from Marrero, La., which is near New Orleans. He joined the Air Force in October 1995 after getting some good advice from his father, who retired from the Air Force.

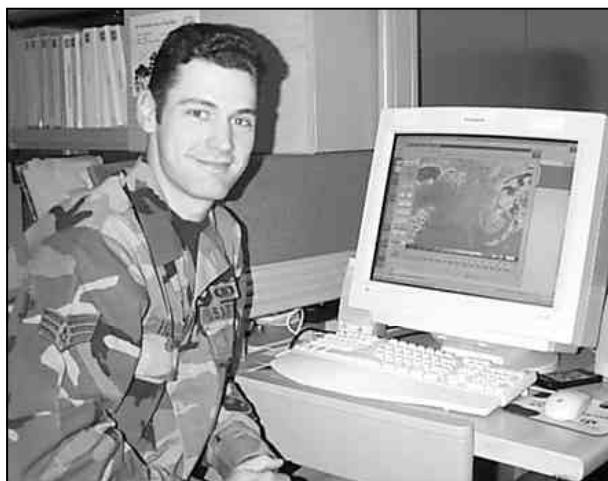

"I was going to college, but I wasn't really into it," Helmer said. "I talked to my dad, who was prior military, and he told me about the benefits of joining the Air Force - working on an education and learning a job that could be a stepping stone to another career."

Helmer arrived here in January after attending forecasting school at Keesler AFB, Miss. He said he's interested in earning a degree in meteorology and is considering applying for the Airman Education and Commissioning Program.

Helmer and his wife, Suki, are expecting their first child in June.

In his spare time, Helmer enjoys golf and playing musical instruments, including acoustic guitar, bass guitar and drums.

Although Helmer is still becoming familiar with the area, he's impressed with what he has seen already. "There are a lot of nice golf courses in the area," he said.

Staff Sgt. Michael Duhe
